

ABSTRACT

A lubricated or wet-friction sliding system having minimized friction, in particular under dynamic load, including a smooth and hard base member and a counter member having an elastic friction surface that is structured to form lubricant reservoirs which release lubricant into the sliding surface when the two sliding members are pressed together, as well as a method for manufacturing and structuring the elastic friction surface.